State Tribunals and Federal Jurisdiction

Burns v Corbett [2017] NSWCA 3 (3 February 2017) considered whether the NSW Civil and Administrative Tribunal was able to exercise judicial power to determine a dispute between residents of different states, and held that it could not, as it was not a Chapter III Court.

The decision is currently on appeal to the High Court, and potentially has significant implications for tribunals in other States. It represents the latest discussion of State tribunals and the exercise of judicial power.

TUESDAY 19 SEPTEMBER 2017 AT 5:30 PM

AT SACAT
100 PIRIE STREET
Hearing Room 1, LEVEL 4

Dr Olijnyk researches and lectures in administrative and constitutional law at the Law School, University of Adelaide, and Stephen McDonald is a barrister at Hanson Chambers, with experience and specialisation in constitutional and administrative law.

~~Refreshments will be available~~
CPD points may be available in respect of this presentation
